Synapse Chiropractic Now Offers Neuroinfiniti Stress Response Evaluation

May 18, 2009, Greer, SC

Stress can have devastating effects on health, relationships and even performance at work. Synapse Chiropractic now offers the Neuroinfiniti Stress Response Evaluation, a pain-free neurophysiologic evaluation using cutting edge technology to evaluate how a patient's nervous system handles stressful situations and its ability to regain a non stressed state.

“The test takes 15 to 20 minutes and represents a view of the dynamics of the patient's nervous system responses to stress and recovery.” said Dr. Anita Wilton. “Each report includes brain wave activity, heart rate, heart rate variability, vascular response, extremity sweat gland activity and muscle reactions.”

The Neuroinfiniti was developed to provide objective, documented evidence that the adjustment alters neurophysiologic function. Once an evaluation is performed, it provides a means to evaluate the effectiveness of chiropractic care in improving the neurophysiology of the body.

The Neuroinfiniti meets all FDA, ISO, and CE requirements and is in its fourth generation.

The Neuroinfiniti program was developed by Dr. Richard Barwell, a graduate of Canadian Memorial Chiropractic College. The Neuroinfiniti is manufactured in Montreal by Thought Technology.

“Neurologically Based Chiropractic and the Neuroinfiniti are quickly gaining strength in the Chiropractic profession and around the world with Chiropractors in Sweden, England, Ireland, South Africa, Dubai, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and the USA applying them both in practice”, said Dr. Barwell, DC, the developer of Neurologically Based Chiropractic.
